Subject: My Opinion

To whom it may concern,

I have followed the microsoft antitrust case with interest.
I believe that the Departmane of Justice should not settle the case, and that the original findings of the case should be adhered to.

These are, in my opinion, the actions that should be taken:

Microsoft should be split, all application software should be produced and sold by one portion that is split off, all operating system software and support should belong to another portion.

All java language development should be halted by Microsoft. This is not to say that they cannot use it, but that they must make their browsers and operating systems 100% compliant with the Sun Microsystems release.

A monetary damages fee should be paid to the holders of the Netscape Software company.

Internet Explorer must be spun off to its own company, completely separate from the applications and the operating systems producers.

It is not fair, cor correct, for Microsoft to lose a judgement that it is a monopoly, then use the money it has illegally earned from that monopoly to buy off the Department of Justice.

Thank you,

Jared Davis
